Toni G. Wolfman

Executive in residence, Bentley's Center for Women and Business

Toni Wolfman is playing a key role in developing the mission and strategic plan for Bentley University's newly established Center for Women and Business.

Wolfman is a former director of, and leads the corporate board search effort for, The Boston Club, New England's largest organization of business and professional women.

She is a co-founder and former President of ION, which is dedicated to advancing women to corporate leadership position.

Wolfman founded and is co-chair of Women Corporate Directors-Boston, and was a long-time director of the Center for Women & Enterprise.

Favorite quote: "Women hold up half the sky."

Proudest accomplishments: On a micro level: Being instrumental in placing more than 60 accomplished women on corporate boards of directors and in getting CEOs, nominating committees and search firms to seriously consider hundreds of others.

What Boston needs most is: To be competitive in the increasingly global economy, business needs to recognize that a culture of inclusion and diversity is imperative.
